

The House that Sits on Blocks

February 2020–Present

Houston, TX

The House that Sits on Blocks

A 1920s era wooden house is lifted from its home in Brazoria County and moved to a site in Houston's South Park neighborhood.

An addition at the back of the house has since been added. The client asks for the added space to be converted into a third bedroom with ensuite bathroom and to update the existing bathroom and kitchen.

The structure's elevated foundation and crawlspace underneath make for a flexible renovation.

Houston, TX. 1986. Photo by Steven Campbell, Houston Chronicle.

SE Texas

Site Plan

Street Elevation

Rear Addition

c 1920

c 2000

2020

The structure's original four-square plan and the proportional addition created the basis for a six-square planimetric organization of spaces.

Plan & elevations (proposed)